David has gained a lifetime of experience within and around the ACT and its growth over the last 30 years. His passion for "design lead" development has seen him involved in diverse roles within multi-disciplinary teams, and leading the delivery of a large range of land and multi-unit housing projects across NSW and the ACT.

David has been forefront in pursuit of changes to improve accessibility, to reintroduce 'age in place' housing and the ongoing battle with poorly designed taxes such as land tax and LVC that disincentivise investment of smaller affordable dwellings.

In his role as lead consultant, David's ethos that "great design wins" is proven across a history of projects where focused design development has produced the best potential outcome, and the highest value. David's depth of understanding and advocacy work has seen him actively involved in the progression of the Multi Unit Housing Code to extend access and accessibility through design.

His involvement extends to master planning and urban design through urban renewal projects and new estate development design. David has a thorough knowledge and understanding of urban design applications through the ACT and NSW planning systems and has a well-developed communication style to effectively progress his client's objectives.
