Tom has substantial experience working on various large scale landscape architecture projects within residential estates in the ACT, as well as medium sized multi-unit residential projects.

With strong graphic presentation skills, Tom focuses on enhancing human interaction within the landscape, blending existing and new elements seamlessly. Enhancing and complementing existing landscapes is one of his key strengths.

Tom has delivered landscape packages from high level concept design through to detailed construction documentation.

Currently, Tom is expanding his expertise in 3D modelling landscapes using Revit and bringing them to life with Lumion rendering. He is committed to improving design communication by integrating digital BIM software with industry-specific technical documentation methods.

Tom places strong emphasis on buildability, ensuring that his designs are not only creative and responsive but also practical and efficient to construct.

He maintains a collaborative working relationship with CED (formerly TCCS), valuing clear communication, compliance and timely coordination within government frameworks. His understanding of local standards and approval processes enables him to navigate projects confidently while delivering practical, solutions-focused outcomes.

In his spare time, you will find Tom consuming anything remotely to do with golf, often thinking of ways to 'improve' the golf course to match his preferred shots.
